

Yesterday Once More

The Romantic Music of the 70's

“Now they’re back again, just like a long lost friend, all the songs I loved so well.” Those lyrics from The Carpenters classic, Yesterday Once More, remind us that nothing rekindles youth or revives the spirit like a great old song. The Seventies ushered in a feel-good era just when we needed it the most.

Now Music-Art Productions brings to the stage an exquisite show featuring beloved musical memories from a decade brimming with muscular pulse and old-fashioned romanticism.

While Yesterday Once More showcases over a dozen artists, the light shines brightest on three legendary acts: Billy Joel, The Carpenters, and Barry Manilow. The classic songs by these great artists remind us again that the Seventies was a decade for unabashed romance.

A company of seven singers and musicians, led by renowned pianist and arranger Mac Frampton, relives a spectacular decade: those happy days when great performers knew how to deliver “the songs that make the whole world sing!”
